

Deutsche Nachrichten

July 1, 1941

Odessa Falls

The Russian city of Odessa fell today to units of Army Group South under the command of General Manstein.

Less resistance was offered than expected from the Russian Army who appeared to have no reserves to call upon. Several Russian Corps are now cut off and surrounded and are expected to surrender soon.

The loss of this city can only be described as a major blow to the Russians as it opens much of the south to advancing German and allied armies.

PZ III in Russia

Battle for the Atlantic

Admiral Scheer eluded several American taskforces shadowing it this past month only to spot a combined British fleet of Cruisers and Destroyers. One can only guess the ships location was reported by the Americans to the British.

In the ensuing battle several British Cruisers were reported to be heavily damaged. Most of the British shots were reported to be wildly inaccurate and the few that did manage to hit bounced off the ships superior armor.

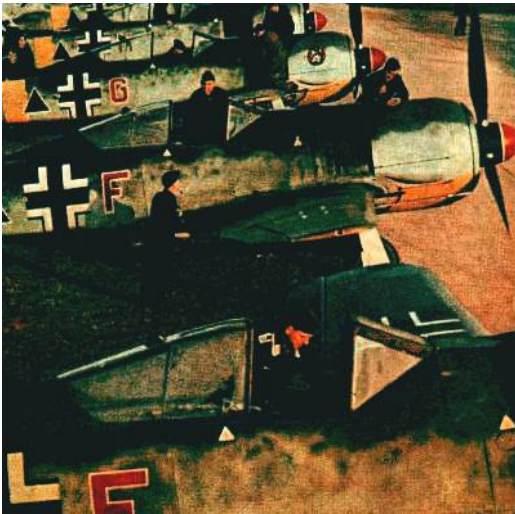

Admiral Scheer in the Atlantic

British hit Hard in Spain

In Spain hundreds of RAF planes are shot down in a vain attempt to halt the flow of German units into Spain. Poor planning and inferior planes were cited as the main causes for their destruction.

Spanish and German units are now poised to remove the Brits from the mainland once and for all.

FW 190's Based in Spain

Weather In Europe

The weather in Europe this up coming month is expected to be mostly clear with scattered clouds and rains.

Roosevelt Driving US to War

In a continued effort to force the USA to war Roosevelt has allowed the navy to ship war materials to England in a clear violation of the Neutrality act. In the words of Admiral Raeder “Brave men are being lost in the Atlantic due to Presidents Roosevelt’s desire for war with Germany. How long will the American people turn a blind eye to this illegal and underhanded attempt at war.”

Admiral Raeder went on to mention how hard it is to tell the nationality of a vessel looking thru the periscope or from a deck of a warship.

German U-Boat in the Atlantic