

NEW MEDAL AWARDED

It was a mission that only presents itself once and due to the nature of this mission it was a volunteer only directive. The mission objective was simple attack the enemy and draw them away from the transport ships. The response received from the volunteers was of a magnitude that no one can or will be allowed to forget. Using ageing ships of ww I, these brave volunteers sought out the Royal Navy, yes the Regia Marina went looking for the enemy, we do not cower as the British press would try and make you believe. They have also falsely reported the loss of 2 of our Battleships, how they can mistake the lines of a WW I dreadnought to our modern fleet is beyond comprehension.

These brave sailors and defenders of our country sailed in 3 separate fleets to engage the enemy at all times, the results were mixed with gains and losses, our fleet of dilapidated WW I dreadnoughts were successful in sinking 3 heavy cruisers and 12 destroyers, unfortunately our fleet also took losses.

As a memory to those that gave their lives to maintain our freedom, the il Duce has announced that all surviving sailors and families of those who perished will be awarded the Medal of CARTAGENA.

Greece to fall in 3 months???

Reports have filtered through that Greece will fall within the next 3 months, after a constant onslaught, lack of supplies and manpower, the greek forces now find themselves fighting on two fronts, more units are landing at the Patras beach head and starting to attack on the greeks flank, the only place left for them now is into the water or into our POW camps, once again we have sent our ambassador to Athens with surrender terms, to refuse these terms now is folly.

Spanish Eyes!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

With Spain back under axis control and the british away to test their eyesight, our forces are taking a long enjoyable period of R&R, where these forces are deployed next is undecided but with Gibraltar about to fall, it is quite easy to notice that Africa is just a short boat trip away. Spain's troops may also be looking at what and where they are needed next but with advances in Russia and Europe mainland secured again, they may wish to extend their borders into morocco and North Africa.
